A SCOTS VICTORY

To a background of the famous Hampden roar from 140,000 throats, dark-shirted Scotland let loose an all-out offensive giving English goalie Swift one of his biggest-ever tests. And he made it. In a game where Scotland were attacking most of the time, the English forwards never really got together. They took a chance in playing Shackleton, (Bradford's boy centre-forward) but it came badly unstuck. The crowd's hopes of a Scots victory went up a da up - and with it went the Glasgow roar.

Play was scrappy most of the time with England on the defensive. Bad luck came when Goalie Swift took a kick in the face. But he carried on and looked like holding the Scotsmen to a draw till Lady Luck took a last minute hand. Husband free kicked into England's goalmouth and Delaney scored. And that was it - a one nil win for Scotland.
