WIMBLEDON
TENNIS STARS IN FINALS

Spectacled Broky of Czechoslovakia came up against Australia's freak-stylist Geoffrey Brown. 24 year-old ex-gunner Brown's terrific double-backhand won him the match, taking him deep into the finals without losing a set.

High fancied Australian Dinky Pails and Britain's Mrs Menzies met tough American opposition in the doubles. Here's a Pails winning smash. But for most of the game, Budge Patty and women's-singles finalist Pauline Betz were unbeatable.

Stars of the Centre Court were men's singles finalist Geoffrey Brown (nearest the camera) and lanky Frenchman Yvon Petra. This was the match for tennis necks. Both men fought themselves to a standstill. Brown pulled out every trick in his double-handed play and still couldn't make it. Petra's height, strength and Latin temperament produced terrific cannon-ball hitting. Once a jockey, he kept a bar in the Paris Champs Elysees, in this match he was out to write the name "Big Yvon" among the Wimbledon winners.

And watch this for a high-ball rally with Petra stomping up the court.

Each won two sets, and when the decider went to Petra temperament got him. Away went the racquet and 6ft 7 Yvon took a high flier at the net. After that Wimbledon greets a new men's singles champion, Petra from Paris.
