PEOPLE IN CAMERA.

This is Lionel Marsen, introducing to you the week's personalities. Meet Field Marshal Montgomery, aboard the grand old Mauretania. Leaving Liverpool for Canada, he continues his job as the architect of tomorrow's British Army. And from London, our big-name ~~sprix~~ cyclists are Europe-bound. Manchester's Reg Harris and South County champion, Lou Bond, left earlier, but the rest of the world title contenders have their pedals geared for victory in Switzerland. And now, (if you don't slither out of your seats), watch the pet pythons welcome to snake-fancier Brian Smith of Fulham. We had a little difficulty here. Mr. Smith told our cameraman that if a python doesn't like you, he can squeeze you to pulp. And after that, we got no more pictures.

It looks easy enough but I think I'll stick to tame rabbits.

From Sussex, Pathe's John Parsons asks you to meet Britain's oldest Licensee, Mrs. Bodle, hard of hearing but a spry 96-year-old.

Resting in Hampshire with her three children, is Mrs. Odette Sanson. The record of her George Cross award says, "The Gestapo seared her back with a red-hot iron. They pulled out her toe nails. And yet she kept her secret and saved her comrades.
