AROUND BRITAIN

Launching Glasgow University Students Charity Week, is the city's Lord Provost - Sir Hector McNeill. His job - to choose a beauty queen. And here she is - Miss Nancy Anderson judges leveliest of fifteen college students who entered the title contest.

Winner's reward comes when Miss Margaret Lockwood places a velvet crown on the winner's head and re-christens her Miss Uno Ygera. First thrill in a week of social engagements to help Glasgow's charities.

And here's a Pathe exclusive on a new British invention - the press-button car park - inventor, Harold Auger. A push on the button, and the car moves away. On the moving sectional floor, it's off to be parked in another part of the building.

When the owner returns for his car, a switch brings it back. A triumph for British engineering skill, the mechanized car park may relieve Britain's parking problem.
