At Margate, Labour leaders meet for their 46th annual Party Conference. The Party Executive turned out early for the opening session. First in the pictures Chancellor Hugh Dalton, with a ready-made seaside smile. Chairman of the meeting is Air Minister Philip Noel Baker. Insurance Baron, Minister of Health was also among the cabinet ministers. In an off-duty moment, Supply Minister John Wilmot and his wife. New Lord President Herbert Morrison. Dr. Edith Summerskill, Food Minister Strachey's deputy.

Here is Emmanuel Shinwell not caring too much.

Sir Stafford Cripps, President of the Board of Trade.

In his speech at the Conference, Prime Minister Attlee said that the government intended to carry out the main points of their election programme during the life of this Parliament. 1,250 delegates attended the Conference, the second since the General Election. With sunshine and the sands outside we left the party discussing its heaviest agenda for many years.

In America, circus folk believe in starting their youngsters off on their career straight from the cradle. This is the beginning of a mother-daughter act on horseback. Mother is doing fine and daughter gets a flying start to stardom.

The children of the troupe are learning fast, and before long they are on their way to an acrobatic career under the Big Top.

Parade of the fathers at a Prague Military Hospital. It's a clinic for soldiers' sons. This one has a brand new maternity department. Lined up for inspection is the latest batch of babies. The new Czech army believes in starting 'em young.

They even get a couple of the 1965 class of sergeant majors.
