ONE MINUTE NEWS

The British Housewives League meets in London's Trafalgar Square. Founded in 1945, the association claims 30,000 members. This gathering was planned to take a slap at the Ministers of Food, and Fuel and Power.

The evening before, the Albert Hall meeting was turned into a free fight. Marching along Pall Mall, things were peaceful and everybody behaved like ladies.

Inside this country house in Harpenden, Hertfordshire is Britain's Public Enemy No. 1. He is just a ledger at the Ministry of Agriculture's Post Station, but on a potatoes patch he really feels at home. Introducing - the Colorado beetle. Under a microscope, the experts take a closer look ~~xxx~~ at the eight legged, black and yellow striped potatoe killer.

Upside down he looks like this. Isolated beetles have been brought across to Britain from the Continent. So far 100 have been found this year. If they are allowed to breed they can destroy vital food the nation needs. Now you've met the gentleman, give him to a policeman if he pays you a call.

Zero hour! The Commandos strike. Orders are to scale the 60ft cliff. Rising at a 90° angle above them, it's a tough job even for a Royal Marine Commando.

Three years ago the men of this unit were in action, on the Normandy beaches. Today it's a peaceful manoeuvre - part of the Royal Tournament. Soldiers of a Commando Cliff Assault Centre from St. Ives, Cornwall, give a display at Olympia.

A ride on the trolley is the quickest way of getting down.

Back to their amphibious jeeps and the Marine Commandos are ready to start all over again. It's all a part of their job.

The 6th International Motor Cycle Meeting opens up at the Isle of Man. This is the Junior T.T. Race. 46 starters thunder round on the first of seven 37 mile laps. Hill climbs, down slopes and corners - it's one of the world's toughest two-wheel tests. Called the mountain course it looks its name every inch of the way.

Coming up to the hairpin is Emie Oliver riding a Norton.

Here they're on the last lap. Through the hill countryside, it's only a few miles to the home stretch.

Only 26 of the 46 starters finished the course. The winner was 36 year old Bob Foster. Riding a Velesette, the Cheltenham rider turned in an average speed of 80 miles per hour. Six year old son Ian is his father's No. 1 fan.
