Beauty

In Atlantic City came fifty glamour queens - representatives of American states and cities. They're here for the annual Miss America beauty contest.

In Convention Hall it's day five of the contest. With a final superior look at one another, the chosen ones come up smiling for the last round.

18,000 spectators wait. In addition to the crown, a $1000 scholarship and lifetime American fame await the winner.

Now it's down to two. It's a 21-year-old from Memphis, who gets the judges' nod - the crown - and the onceover.

Five feet seven inches of Memphis belle becomes Miss America 1947.

Sport

In the Colombes Stadium, Paris, British athletes - in white shorts - meet a French team. Britain's girls proved their superiority by winning all but two events. Here Mlle Ostensmeyer of France wins the high jump.

In the men's high jump Britain came out on top, Prince Adedoyin was second to Alan Paterson. The women's 80 metre hurdles saw Oxford's Maureen Gardiner take an early lead. Her time of eleven and a half seconds was a new British record.

An unlucky 100 yards race contributed to our men's defeat. With flying-streak McDonald Bailey still handicapped by muscle trouble, France took the lead. John Wilkinson went all out to catch him but it was the Frenchman's race.
