WORLD AT YOUR ELBOW

Steaming into the Polish harbour of Gdynia is the "Eastern Prince" with 15 hundred repatriates from Britain.

4 Last of a contingent of 90 thousand ex-servicemen, these veterans of the Eighth Army and the Normandy campaign return in response to their Government's appeal. For Poland needs the hands of all her people to tackle work of reconstruction.

More than a hundred British wives accompany their husbands, many with children born in Britain.

No scenes of welcome mark their arrival, but the babies hold the key to friendship in a strange land.

5 Across the Atlantic, another New England brings joy to youth, as New Hampshire schoolchildren revel in the season's heaviest snowfalls.

5 Skiing classes are part of the curriculum, and many an interesting story is written on the white page of the nursery slopes. The writing isn't very good - for frequently the nib gets crossed and more than one copy-book is blotted.

The highway of learning is a rough one in New Hampshire.

1 Intercepted on a New Jersey highway is a convey, which provides the clue to a mystery explosives shipload seized in a nearby port. Police find the lorries carry a cargo of M-3 explosive, nearly twice as destructive as T.N.T. Destination is a lonely farmhouse, where another 50 tons is found packed in war surplus crates. Knowledge of their contents is denied by the farmowner. Simultaneously, as New York State Police detain a second convoy, ownership becomes clear. The cargo was for shipment to Palestine's illegal armies, on the admission of arrested drivers.

2/1 Threatening the peace of mind of every eligible male in the United States, Florida dictates new styles in Leap Year sweaters guaranteed to smooth the pathway to the altar steps. While British girls struggle to catch their bachelor friends with a new line in made-over duffle suiting (coupon free), Miss Florida gets out the knitting needles to prove that wool's the only thing for comfort. To make the long-sleeved model even more comfortable....a becoming hood is attached.

Intercepted on a New Jersey highway is a convoy, which provides the clue to a mystery explosives shipload seized in a nearby port. Police find the lorries carry a cargo of H-3 explosive, nearly twice as destructive as T.N.T. Destination of the load is a lonely farmhouse, where another 50 tons is found packed in war surplus crates. Knowledge of their contents is denied by farm owner Levy. Simultaneously, as New York State Police detain a second convoy, ownership of the explosives becomes clear. The whole destructive cargo was for eventual shipment to Palestine's illegal armies, on the admission of arrested drivers.

TNT

Youngson Baruch

X This is the Lowy farm, near Asbury Park, New Jersey where police found fifty-one tons of M-3 super explosive. Destined for Palestine, it had been purchased from the War Assets Administration. Farm-owner Lowy said he did not know what the explosive-filled crates contained - and the mystery, which began with the discovery of TNT aboard a ship, deepened.

X Then young business executive Leonard Weisman disclosed that he had purchased the explosives to be stored for eventual shipment to the Jewish Agency's military arm, Haganah, in the Holy Land. Trucks were stopped in New Jersey and more M-3 seized while Weisman claimed that his purchase was legal. Sixty percent more destructive than TNT, these blocks will not go off unless detonated.

X Other trucks are intercepted in New York State as the M-3, totalling two hundred tons, is rounded up. The drivers are held. Weisman has announced that he will sue to recover the explosives - which may or may not reach Haganah to take part in the guerilla war with Arab forces opposing a Jewish nation in Palestine.
