THE KING VISITS THE BERKSHIRE REGT

Posing with officers of the Royal Berkshires at their Reading depot, the King provides the regimental photo album with a permanent record of his visit - the first since he became Colonel-in-Chief of the Regiment in May last year.

Serving personnel and over a hundred 'old comrades,' who have vivid memories of the Boer war and Egyptian campaigns, turn out for inspection by his Majesty. The King chats to veterans whose recollections embrace much of the Regiment's colourful history and whose medals testify to the role that each one played in compiling its long list of achievements.
