Southampton

Landing at Southampton - with not one sweater in her luggage - is film star Lana Turner and husband No. 4, Bob Topping. Colleague Eleanor Parker welcomes the honeymooning couple. Leaving behind in Hollywood the clothes that made her famous, the Sweater Queen (her hair dressed in an elaborate upswept style) causes a quayside traffic hold-up. Dockers down tools as Mr. and Mrs. Topping are helped off the gangway by Pathe's reporter. Playing down the cost of her over-publicised wedding, Lana answers a personal question:

San Francisco

From a film star's trousseau to a baby's layette is no far cry. San Francisco holds its first baby show of the city's twenty five thousand Chinese population. The prize committee has decreed that the biggest awards will go to the tots in the best Chinese costumes. But all the kids are so cute there are additional prizes for the heaviest baby, the deepest dimples, the longest eyelashes, the most curls and the best teeth. By the time it ends, everyone has an award. And the Grand Prize for the most beautiful gown, goes to tiny Katherine Tong.

Old Saint Mary's Square in the heart of Chinatown in San Francisco is packed for the first baby show ever held by the city's twenty-five thousand Chinese population. The prize committee has decreed that the biggest awards will go to the tots in the best Chinese costumes. But all the kids are so cute that there are additional prizes for the heaviest baby, the deepest dimples, the longest eyelashes, and the most curls and the best teeth. By the time it ends, every one has an award. And the grand prize, ~~given~~ for the most beautiful gown, goes to tiny Katherine Xung Tong.
