

THEIR MAJESTIES ATTEND CHELSEA FLOWER SHOW

The King and Queen make the Chelsea Flower Show once again a Royal event. This year's show surpasses even the pre-war displays and dispels any doubts that English gardeners and landscape artists lead the world.

Queen Mary, who is celebrating her 83rd birthday, never fails to grace the occasion with her presence. The exhibit of the W.V.S. claims her particular attention but her interest in all things remains unabated.

The Royal visitors see all sections of the colourful show and express their admiration for the exquisite blooms and lay-out. The vitality of the Queen Mother amazes everyone. She holds an unrivalled place in the hearts of the British people. To her go the nation's wishes for health and happiness for many years to come.
