STAGE AND PRESS FOOTBALL

The Stage and Press agreed to differ over football at Harold's Cross the other day. The Graspnet's versus the Inkblets with the whatnots watchings, but no names, no pack-drill! Macnamara was busy so they had the St. James' band for the parade.

Fifteen thousand turned up and before Glancy could lower his beam they were at the ball tooth and nail. But by the way they went at it, you'd think they'd shape up better at Phil the Fluter's ball.

'Twas in aid of the Cappagh Hospital and, before they'd done, a nice lot of work they'd found for it.

Trespassers were persecuted with the full vigour of the law, but there was still a lot of horse-play.

When a goalkeeper slipped up the Man in Black took the penalty, whilst the blood-thirsty spectators slavered with glee.

Ahi well, 'twas a famous victory - but we still don't know who won!
