TO AND FROM MIDDLE EAST

Past "Victory" and through Portsmouth decks march the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers bound for the Mediterranean. They're travelling on H.M.S. "Triumph" whilst another 2,000 of the Third Infantry Division sail on "Illustrious," two Korean veterans turned into troopships because of Middle East danger.

With Binge their Boxer, they're bound full-speed for Cyprus to replace troops flown to the Canal Zone when trouble started.

Meanwhile, from the Canal Zone the "Empress of Australia" returns to Liverpool with a ship-load of service families. It's a sad home-coming because they've left their men behind. Two-hundred went out in the "Empress" to make homes but were sent back without landing. Four-hundred others left homes in Egypt - like Mrs. Foulds and Paul. Seven who went out to become brides would have been saddest of all, so the 'powers-that-be' hurriedly fixed up seven weddings and Boris, Ivy, Jean and their four friends return fairly happy as the "four-hour" brides.
