

EGYPT: MORE FAMILIES HOME

At Southampton, 783 evacuees arrive from the Canal Zone. 460 of them are children. When the Army cleared the Canal Zone in case of big trouble, the S.S. ATLANTIS bound from New Zealand to London was more or less commandeered to take them to safety. Now it's good-bye to the ship's nursery and all ashore to a cold and blustery England.

But on shore there was a big surprise for some of them. After tearful good-byes in Suez, many wives found their husbands had been flown home ahead of them. England wasn't such a bad place to come back to after all!
