

OXFORD v. CAMBRIDGE

Thirty-thousand cheer as Cambridge kick off and the 70th Inter-Varsity rugby match is on. Heavy frost underfoot makes the going very slippery but rightaway Cambridge turn on the pressure. In the last five years they've only scored two tries at Twickenham and Oxford have won four of the matches. The ball goes to Dalgleish, he's running through nicely. He can score here - but he slips and Oxford breathe again. They're all-out tussles, these matches. New Courts makes a run for Oxford but Reeve tackles.

Cambridge line-out. The greasy ball goes to Wells - but he's missed it. Bullard runs in ... Wimperis tackles Wells and Bullard has scored.

Bullard fails with the kick and at half-time Oxford lead by three points to nil.

Second-half ... Oxford attacking and looking dangerous ... more so now as Bebbyer collects and begins one of his famous runs.

Cambridge are playing better; but again Oxford attack, and from 30 yards out, Brewer heads far the line to touch down behind the posts.

Bullard converts to make it Oxford eight Cambridge nil.

Rugby is the one major sport in which Oxford hold a lead in wins over Cambridge. They're on top and mean to stay there. And here they go again. Wydell collects at full speed and runs through to score Oxford's third and last try.
