

CYCLING ON STILTS

Henry's off to Brighton. The trouble is there's an awful lot of bicycle and an awful lot of Henry. Also there's a strong head wind. It's level here so Henry climbs onboard once again. Henry is a 29-year-old Pole, Henry Levandovski, who used to be a ring boy with Bertram Mills and learned stilt walking from the clown. Now he uses a 7-foot cycle; walking is so tiring. Hurry up, Henry. You're late!

Whoa! You're in Brighton now! Six-and-a-quarter hours for the 53-mile run. That's no laughing matter! But it's wonderful what a bottle of pop will do. You know, it's stunts like this that give Henry that stilted look - he's quite a friendly chap really!
