

NEW HOUSES TO SOLVE PROBLEM

At Deasford, Leicestershire, the first two "People's Houses" are ready for the Minister of Housing, Mr. Harold Macmillan to inspect with the architect. Built in 12 weeks for less than a thousand pounds each, these houses seem one answer to the housing drive. With living-room, dining-rooms and kitchen downstairs, they have three bedrooms upstairs. Women will find their work has been made as simple as possible. That's because when he made the plans, architect Mr. Appleton asked housewife Mrs. Appleton for suggestions.

As ex-Sergeant Beast hears the familiar 'come and get it' he's home at last. Here's Mrs. Beast's point-of-view. You can see the woman's planning in the kitchen. That's young William putting on the skins. Hot water comes from the continuous burning fire. The fuel store is a built-in part of the house.

Bedrooms have built-in cupboards which make rooms so much easier to keep tidy. Market Bosworth Council has placed a contract for 38 more of these houses in its drive to put every man by his own fireside.
