

RECORD SNOW IN CALIFORNIA

Night and day ploughs tear into the snow after California's worst blizzards in 50 years. Ten feet deep lies a car - and they've only reached the roof! Elsewhere the tale's the same. If the postman knocks once today it'll be a miracle.

At Donner Pass the snow's 26 feet deep along the highway. Trapped by the blizzards, the crack streamliner "City of San Francisco" from Chicago is still snowbound, though her 200 passengers were taken off by rescue squads. After long hours of digging, she's free at last, and, five days behind schedule, the luxury train resumes her journey to the coast and warmth!
