RETURN TO ARROMANCHES

To the Caen War Memorial - led by their Chairman, Major-General Sir Richard Howard-Vyse), some members of the British Legion to pay tribute to those who fell that the gateway to freedom might be opened for Europe. Sir Richard represents survivors of all services as he lays a wreath on this the first British Legion pilgrimage to the Second War battlefield.

It is 8 years since these dead landed and fell - time enough for many of us to forget their sacrifice ...But here even the young remember, for these people felt the heavy hand of the oppressor, and to them each life given was one payment nearer their ransom.
