HORSEMAN'S SUNDAY

The French Mounted Band, one of the highlights of the Edinburgh Festival's Tattoo, parades before a crowd of 10,000 at Queen's Park, Edinburgh, leading a procession of nearly 200 horses for the Annual Horseman's Sunday, the first ceremony of its kind to be held in the Highlands.

Councillor Archibald D. Jameson is among the huge crowd to watch the colourful procession. Horses and ponies of every size and colour, of every breed and nationality, have come to Queen's Park today to receive a blessing at this, their own ceremony. The service is soon to begin and the crowd is stilled.

In a voice that is known to millions as that of the radio padre, the Reverend Ronald Selby Wright begins the simple ceremony:
