2,000 men and women of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve stand on Horse Guards Parade for review by Her Majesty the Queen. In a steady drizzle, the Queen and Prince Philip make the inspection from a Land Rover. This parade marks the Golden Jubilee of the Wavy Navy. Fifty years old last year, the review was postponed because of the Coronation.

The figure of Nelson is shrouded in the mist and rain as, the inspection over, the Queen walks to the dais to address the parade. The rain falls even more heavily during Her Majesty's speech:

Britain's "citizen sailors" soaked but still smart, march past in salute before carrying out Her Majesty's order with Navy's traditional tot of rum.....
