CANADA - HURRICANE AFTERMATH.

Flood waters cover Holland Marsh in Ontario, following Hurricane Hazel which swept up from America to carve a path of destruction through the province. Rich farmland lies beneath twenty feet of water.

A thousand are homeless - most of them are settlers from Europe's lowland countries, like those who originally reclaimed Holland Marsh. Gifts of food were rushed to the area immediately the Hurricane had struck, and clothing and medical supplies were flown in. Already the hard working people of Holland Marsh have made plans to have the land ready again in time for the next planting season.
