

AVIATION NEWS -- 3

His eyes already covered with match books, gauze, tape and now a black mask -- a self-styled mentalist has a hood slipped over his head for a fantastic airplane flight. A padlock -- and finally some sealing wax -- supposedly eliminates any tricks as "Count" Alessandro di Cagliostro -- just beating CAA officials sent to stop the stunt -- taxis into Biscayne Bay.

Now, watch for yourself.

Gliding in for a landing, the "Count" completes his thirteen-minute flight.

Everything seems just as before the flight -- and the Count shrugs off the stunt as "extra-sensory perception" -- a kind of "flying blind" best left to the Count.
