INDIAN HORSE SHOW.

In the days of British rule, the Imperial Delhi Horse Show was one of the most spectacular events of the year. S suspended in 1942 because of the war, it has been revived this year on the initiative of the Indian Army, with a very varied programme - and not confined to horses, either - there's a camel or two thrown in for good measure.

It's not clear whether the idea's to get the other chap off his hump or to climb on with him - so let's cut the cackle and get back to the 'esses. Here's the tent-peging event, which calls for a steady eye and a strong wrist.

Jemadar Hazure Singh has both - and he wins handsomely. The Delhi Horse Show seems well on its way to regaining its former splendour.
