HUMEZ DEFEATS McATEER.

Pat McAteer (on the right), British and Empire Middleweight Champion, battles with Frenchman Charles Humez for the European Crown. Humez is a rough-and-rugged fighter, but for the first few rounds, McAteer holds his own. In the fourth, his left eye is injured - and according to Pat's manager, it was Humez's bullet-like head that did it. Humez stumbles - and the referee parts them.

Hammer and tongs, with the Frenchman doing everything he can to work on McAteer's injured eye. Finally, in the eighth, the ref examines the eye and decides the fight is over. Humez keeps the title. Without his eye injury, could Pat have gone the distance? That's anyone's guess!
