

CLASSES ON THE "CUTTY SARK":

"Cutty Sark", in her dry dock at Greenwich, plays a new role; she's an evening school for amateur yachtsmen. Commodore Sir Roy Gill - a great seaman, and wartime A.D.C. to the King - passes on some of his vast experience. At the blackboard, is Captain G. Watkins, Extra-Master of the "Cutty Sark", giving the weekend sailors - under the critical eyes of the past, their first lessons in seamanship and navigation.

Models on a table-map are used to teach students the rules of the road at sea - a much more effective method than learning it parrotfashion out of a book.

"Cutty Sark" boasts a fine collection of figureheads. Like this one from the old "Tantivy". Sir Roy Gill is a mine of information on these relics of sailing days - emblems of a tradition in which "Cutty Sark" played a proud part, and which she is now helping to maintain,
