

IKE AT NATO TALKS:

To the N.A.T.O. Summit Talks in Paris comes the man nobody believed would be able to make it - President Eisenhower with his Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. This get-together of NATO heads of State is one of the most important since the war for the 15 Atlantic Pact countries, and for the world. Prime Minister Harold Macmillan is here for Britain. The agenda - the future of NATO in this rocket age.

Luxemburg's Mr. Beck presides. Premier Felix Gaillard represents France, and Chancellor Adenauer, Federal Germany. But Premier Macmillan and his European colleagues are all waiting to hear the man who risked his health to attend - Dwight D. Eisenhower.

One thing is certain - without Ike, this would not have been a real Summit Conference.
