

FASHION SHOWS AUTUMN PLANS

59/60

Autumn fashions are in the news and designer Frederick Starke showed some of his collection in a London setting. Fetta Dene wearing a suit with a collarless neckline in overchecked wool with a matching scarf. On the right is a suit which features patch pockets edged with saddle stitching and straight cut jacket, elegantly wrapped around Hedda Markes.

For motoring with the hood down and before the winter really sets in, light tweed and wool is the answer. The lucky car owner is wearing a dress of soft check tweed with a wide fichu neckline, which slots through the belt to end in a fringed scarf.

The car admirer chooses wool in a dress with the "swiss" neckline. For later in the day at cocktail time, Frederick Starke showed us a sari dress in pure chiffon with gold embroidery and another in white satin and full length embroidered back panel.

For sheer luxury in evening dresses, satins and silks have been used since women first started to wear clothes. This year will be no exception. The sheath dress is still very much in fashion. Spinning pills and dieting will also continue to be in the fashion to help some people keep up with the times. So now we know what elegant women will look like this Autumn. We hope their husbands bank balances look as beautiful.
