

O.K. CHIEF!

Hear ye! Hear ye! The South African Administration for Bantu Development has authorized the proclamation of Edward Patrick Labone Molotlegi as Chief of the Ba-Fhekeng tribe. So the new chief's 40-man army marches, and his 80,000 strong tribe celebrates. And in case you're in doubt, correct headgear with a kilt is a fireman's helmet.

And if anyone thinks we're taking the micky - we're not. The Ba-Fhekeng are a highly civilised tribe who've had the sense not to throw overboard Africa's natural emberance; and by wearing Admiral's uniform to listen to all the official speechmaking, the new chief shows he approves of his people's attitude to ceremonial occasions. Quite frankly, so do we!