

60/33.

EASTER PARADE.

London's Easter Parade cast affectionate looks back to the past, in the procession in Battersea Park. It was organised by the British Travel Association. When Easter comes, can summer be far behind? We shall see. But even if it wasn't very warm, everybody had light hearts. If you can't be gay at Easter, when can you?

The Pearly Kings and Queens remind us that a lot of old London survives, among new fashions skyscraping office-buildings, and all the other evidence of this day and age.

A 1925 Bentley; and who wouldn't be proud to own it? Since those vintage years, cars have improved in many ways, but if only we had room on the roads to drive them.

Miss Tasmania leads here to a glimpse of the days when romance didn't depend on something with an engine, and you get a thrill on a bicycle made for two.

The parade came during a few days holiday, which we all enjoyed. There'll be pleasant memories of Easter, 1960.