

D-225901

60/55

PICASSO EXHIBITION:

London's Tate Gallery honours Picasso - the man who painted this in 1895 and has gone on painting ever since. Without doubt the century's greatest artist - though perhaps the most puzzling (to some people anyway) - Pablo Picasso was the founder of Cubism - but then he's been the founder of so many things. He gets an idea, invents a new style and by the time other painters have caught up with him and started trying to copy it, he's way ahead of them inventing something else.

Millions of pounds' worth of Picasso paintings have been borrowed from all over the world for this exhibition. Picasso's father was an artist, too; but when Pablo was 13, he was already so brilliant that Dad gave him all his brushes and never touched another canvas. Since then, Picasso has faced critics and competitors - and wiped the floor with them all.