NARRATION

At the cross roads of the world -- Times Square in New York City -- a big crowd including a delegation of vegetarians is here to welcome Britain's Dr. Barbara Moore, the 56-year-old lady hiker who just completed her three thousand mile transcontinental heel and toe marathon from San Francisco. On her 85 day jaunt from the West Coast she thrived on grass juice and raw carrots and is in fine fettle and not tired at all. She made the last six miles by bus because the crowd was waiting for her but she'll retrace those miles tomorrow. A real walking champion she gets a warm welcome from Manhattanites on the sidewalks of New York.
