

THIS MAN KENNEDY.

Picture of a man on top of the world; 43, U.S. President, pretty wife, lovely daughter. What more could any man wish? Jack Kennedy was born into a rich family, whose fortunes were built up in the Land of Opportunity. But a hundred-and-ten years ago his great-great grandfather lived outside New Ross, Danganstown, Ireland. Starvation faced him in his tiny farm cottage, and he emigrated to America. Josephine Ryan, Jack's cousin lived close by. New Ross was excited when Jack was elected. Where are they off to? Maybe emigrating too, to try their luck.

The youngest ever President won't take office till January, but his election has been a tonic to America. He promises the new policy that'll put the United States back into World leadership.
