PRESSMEN ON TEST.

In the Municipal Museum at the Hague an art exhibition was to be opened. Not a thrilling event, you might think; but wait, look, listen:

Yes, a nude, but in an art gallery, surely - well, she felt strongly about it. Nice to know that some people still demand a high moral standard. But interruptions couldn't be tolerated. The clever pressmen captured the scene perfectly.

But what spirit she had. And what a press picture.

Was she beaten? Not on your life. Not while there's law in Holland and strong policemen to enforce it.

So back she went, to make art lovers realize they'd gone too far. The picture's dramatic removal was vividly recorded.

Now let's admit it was all a hoax. The woman was an actress, helping in an examination for Press photographers. All their own work. But when the Exhibition was opened - not a photographer in sight.
