

U.S. TEST DEFENCES

America's Crack Airborne Divisions demonstrated latest battle techniques under the eye of the nation's commander-in-chief President Kennedy. Included in the review were groups equipped for any climate. It was an indication that the country is very much on the alert, taking the threat of megaton bombs more seriously than most Europeans. Nor are they going to be lulled by nuclear war-talk into giving up conventional defense. Among many things the President saw was an amphibious cargo-carrier. But the man with a rocket-assisted flying belt, calmly crossing 100 yards of water as if by magic, nearly stole the show.

After that, the troops let fly with everything they'd got. And that was plenty.
