

PICASSO 80. NOT OUT.

Pablo Picasso never stops working. Ceramist, sculptor, painter, in one medium and another the flow of his artistic output is unceasing. To the flattery of admirers and ridicule of the millions who don't understand what he's getting at, the most famous artist in the world is immune. In the village of Vallauris he just goes on working, as the value of his creations go on mounting. But living there, he's made that part of the south of France almost as famous as himself. No wonder they feted him on his 80th birthday; What a sale it would be if his works in the exhibition down there were up for auction. If you sit for a portrait by him it's entirely at your own risk. Jacqueline, his fourth wife. Well, the world of art salutes Picasso; 80, still going strong.
