

AUSSIES HOLD DAVIS CUP.

Too hot by far for the Italians Sirola and Pietrangeli, though not for Roy Emerson or Neal Fraser. If they could win the match, the Davis Cup remained Australia's. Pietrangeli applied his own cooling spray, and as it was 112 at Melbourne's Kooyong Stadium, he could do with it. Now, with Emerson serving, for the crucial match.

Sirola volleys. A point for the Italians.

Emerson serves again.

Fraser smashes, with the Italians hopeless.

Sirola serving. Match point to the Australians.

Sirola's back-hand puts it out. Game, set and match to Australia.

In the Davis Cup, nowadays, nobody can touch the Aussies.
