To be a racing driver is the the path to glory - if you stay alive. The present generation of top drivers can't go on for ever. Stirling Moss, for example, in the familiar No. 7, must retire some day.

Roy Salvadori (a Londoner)

Covering himself with glory at Stuttgart - Innes Ireland, who's rapidly advancing to world championship class.

Then there's John Surtees, once the world's best motor-cyclist, now winning his spurs in motor racing.

Jack Brabham - ~~himself~~ a world champion, here receiving an award.

LS Montlehry Track. A few shots of Jim Russell setting the 6-mile record.

Perhaps the answer to the question, Where are the next lot of racing-drivers coming from ? can be answered by the driver shown here when setting the world six-mile record a few years ago.

✓ MCU Russell after the record.

He's Jim Russell. Injured at Le Mans in '59, he's out of motor-racing himself and is now established in his own school for racing drivers at an old airfield in Norfolk.

LS Russell's track in Norfolk.
