POLISH AIRMEN SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND.

Sir Kingsley Wood, the Air Minister, inspects some of the young heroes of Poland.

They wear the uniform, of the Royal Air Force Reserve, and everyone of them proved himself, in the early days of September, when the Germans invaded their country.

They have now sworn allegiance to King George, as well as to their own Kingdom of Poland. With Their help as a very real ~~part~~ part of the R.A.F. that ancient Kingdom will rise again, in all its former glory.

Some of these young men had the greatest difficulty in reaching this country, but grit and determination overcame all obstacles. Something of these great qualities is shown in their fine swinging stride, as they march past.

The Spirit of Poland flames again, in her young manhood; who have sworn to do or die, in the sacred cause of Freedom.
