THE QUEEN IN SCOTLAND.

Its a red letter day for the Capital City ... .The populace turns out en masse to greet Her Majesty, when she inspects the Edinburgh Civil Defence units. The Queen pauses frequently to chat with members, and many a man and woman will carry the memory of her graciousness, for a long time to come. The activities of the AFS, interests her Majesty enormously..... She asks many questions inna way which makes it clear that she has the ~~most~~ interests of the personnel at heart.

Later, the Queen visits the Aunslie Hospital, which is now being used for light casualties. As usual, she brightens the wards with her charming presence... a certain tonic for these feeling not so good.

The crowd says "Thanks, Your Majesty" - - and means it!
