THE QUEEN ELIZABETH'S GREAT VOYAGE.

The mighty liner moves majestically down the Clyde on her way to New York. Daring the U.Boats (and all the other perils of the deep), she heads for the new world in the greatest secret voyage in history. No vast crowds to see her off, just a handful of local people, without the slightest idea of where the "pride of the Clyde" is going. We know now, that the Queen Elizabeth has arrived safely across the Atlantic, where the reception she had from a welcome party of half a million people was a marvellous tribute to all associated with the achievement. Mr. Churchill(who helped to plan the secret voyage) heard about its success, and he said "I am delighted, but I never had any doubt it". Its the sort of thing to warm the cockles of our hearts.
