

GERMAN PRISONERS ARRIVE.

Dutch troops stand guard at a British Port... when German Prisoners from Holland are brought ashore. More than two hundred and fifty of them are parachute troops..... who failed in their trecherous mission.

Many of them are found to carry dangerous looking knives... with blades that sheet out. Most of them are obviously youngsters, the average age of all of them is eighteen. They were sent on a brutal job, but the British Government isn't going to make that a reason... for giving them anything but humanitarian treatment. Almost immediately on landing, they're given a square meal... which must be rather a surprise to them after what they've been told at home about our food shortage.

So that's another batch out of the way.
