

MADE IN AUSTRALIA.

And while we and our Allies hold the front line....
the Empire is mobilising behind us. Here are the first 3.7 anti aircraft guns to be made in Australia....
handed over by the Assistant Minister of supply.

"It is my pleasant and indispensable duty
General Sir Brudenell White, to hand over to you on behalf of ~~your~~ the department of the Army....
these two guns of Australian manufacture. A class of completion of which every Australian will,
I know, be justifiably proud."

They were made in a Commonwealth Ordnance Factory. They are the first of...well... as many as we need, in the great struggle in which the whole Empire shares.

They were made in Australia and made magnificently.

And so were these fighting men. Another Contingent of the A.I.F. embarks for overseas. However tough the job... these are the boys to see it through, with Australian initiative, Australian toughness, and the unconquerable 'Digger' smile.

No blaze of banners, no surge of cheering crowds to see them off.
They're on their way to do a job of work for the Empire...and the Empire knows how they're going to do it.

The stoker has thrown down his shovel, the clerk has thrown aside his pen and each has picked up a rifle, to ~~substitute~~ join the swelling ranks of khaki which form the Army of Australia.

RECRUITING IN AUSTRALIA.

And that's not all... as the Allies fling every man, and every resource into the struggle against Nazi and Fascist Hordes, more young men of Australia answer the call. Only one thought is in their minds.... the aggressors must be stopped.

And now they are to be transformed from civilians into soldiers of the King and Empire. Already there's a new set to their shoulders, a new lift to their chins.... they're on the verge of the big adventure.... proud to be of service in their country's hour of need.
