

MORE TROOPS FROM "DOWN UNDER"

These pictures were taken in Britain. Here... standing on the soil of the Motherland, are the men from Australia and New Zealand...while thousands of others are waiting to come ashore. They form the first large contingent of troops from down under. Great ships of our Merchant Marine...carried them through troubled waters... the Royal Navy saw them safely to port....Now they join the men from Canada and Newfoundland. So the Empire will be well represented, in the defence of our Island Fortress.

Today we have more men under arms than ever before in our history. We shall give a good account of ourselves. The Anzacs have brought their own nurses with them. They havebrought with them too a mighty determination and a carefree faith in the future. You can see that in their faces.
