S. A. WOMEN DISPATCH RIDERS.

South African Women Dispatch riders enter for the Parkhill Club Motor-Cycle Trials held at Durban, and come out well on top. Despite the fact that they compete against a number of men, they bag first, second and third places. In these contests it isn't speed that counts so much as the competence with which entrants handle their machines.

An important section of the ever growing army of Women on Wheels, these girls can rough-ride with the best of them. It needs grit to push your way over country like this.

Service in the saddle means a lot of bumps and bruises, but the girls can take it. They're worthy allies of Empire Transport units advancing on the road to victory.
