U.S. DESTROYERS ARRIVE IN BRITAIN.

The First Flotilla of the destroyers released by the United States Government to Britain arrive at an English Port. As one Naval man said "They look good to me". The first to be renamed will bear the honored name of CHURCHILL. Surely that must be a good omen. The others will be named after towns and villages in Britain and the United States.

At the same time the destroyers arrived here, Mr. Sumner Welles renewed President Roosevelt's pledge of more and yet more aid to Britain. So we may be sure that even greater assistance than is evidenced by these ships of war, will be forthcoming from the New World.

We welcome these destroyers as a contribution to the increased might of the British Navy. "And may God bless all those who sail in them".
