

ST. GEORGES DAY.

Men of the Royal Northumberland Fusiliers receive the red and white roses which they alone are entitled to wear in their caps in honour of St. George. It's a custom which dates back to the 18th Century; quite a feather in their caps (as a matter of fact, they used to wear a feather - another ancient privilege). And the ladies of the regiment wear the token too. Roses, Lipsticks, Cigarettes "little gal".
