AQUATIC AFFAIRS.

One way of forgetting the war is to go on the bust.

At Long Beach California, girls with their future before them are in a contest for the photogenic queen of the year.

A sailer shutterbug who always looked up to women goes all out after angles. Maybe if we stick around for a while, we'll get a look at their faces.

Yes, here she is...Miss Snapshot 1941. And talking of snaps here's a tall fish story from Florida where the local mermaids prove that porpoises never bite the hand that feeds them - although they'll leap out of the water to get it. And that goes for underwater etiquette too. In these surroundings a girl's perfectly safe - the poor fish only think of food. Of course its a good thing to give a turtle the right of way - but they're all perfect gentlemen.
