GREEK FLEET JOINS ALLIED NAVY.

The magnificent fighting qualities of the Greek Army are equally shared by the Royal Hellenic Navy. The Cruiser AVEROFF and several modern destroyers, to mention only a few, are doing trejan service with our Mediterranean Fleet, and may well be giving a good account of themselves in the island-studded waters of the Aegean Sea or Mediterranean. Captain Vaspouloff, Commander of the AVEROFF and the men under his command are visited by Prince Paul of Greece.

The gallant warships of Greece have achieved many notable successes against Italian submarines, ^{and} in the Battle of Crete make immortal glory for their fatherland.
