

PICTURED PARAGRAPHS.

It's a proud day for the WRENS in the Nore Command when the Queen pays them, her first official visit. The feminine branch of the Senior Service is by no means wanting in smartness. Their business-like bearing on the parade ground says a lot for the efficient way they are doing their jobs on active service.

TULIPS..... acres and acres of them, and they're all growing in Lincolnshire where between forty and fifty million bulbs are under cultivation for the American market. Tiptoe through the tulips go the girls snipping off the heads so that (as Mr. Middleton would tell you) "the full strength of the plant may be returned to the bulb." The Dutch Industry is now flourishing in Britain.

. MOGADISHU, the capital of one-time Italian Somaliland. And now that we are there, we'll join the ladies and meet some South African nurses who are coming ashore. They're from a hospital ship on a brief visit to see the sights of Mogadishu, before they set to work staffing a casualty clearing station. They've volunteered for anywhere in Africa, so they won't have much time for sight-seeing.
